Helping Families Navigate Recovery

Case Managers walk alongside survivors, connecting them with resources, contractors, housing assistance, and other recovery services.

Securing Resources to Rebuild

BCLTRG raises public and private resources and matches them to partner organizations on the ground to meet families where they are.

Building a Network of Support

The Buncombe County Long-Term Recovery Group (BCLTRG) coordinates a growing network of nonprofit, government, faith-based, philanthropic, and community partners that meet diverse survivor needs by working together. Together we are working to ensure that each household has what it needs to fully recover.

“No single organization can meet the complexity of needs. Working together, we have dramatically increased available resources, helping 1,855 survivors on the road to recovery.”

— SARAH ROTH, INTERIM EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR BCLTRG

HOME REPAIRS underway across Buncombe County

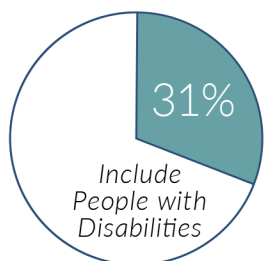

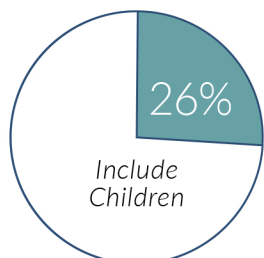

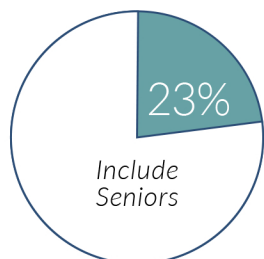

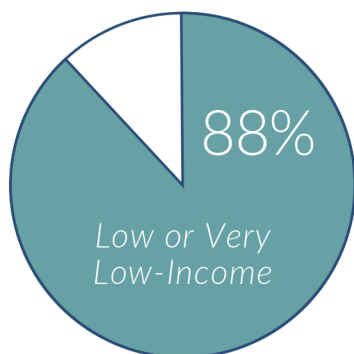

Hurricane Helene devastated their community, and left them without heat or air conditioning for 18 months. BCLTRG funded their repairs and made their home livable again.

“They showed up with a new [HVAC] unit and now we can finally be comfortable in our home again.”

— SWANNANOVA RESIDENT

The Work is Not Over

Two Years Later, What Remains?

Recovery is far from over. The need for help is increasing. Federal and state programs are ending, and national disaster responders are moving on. Cases are being transferred to the BCLTRG. Families need case management, financial and material resources, and continued advocacy to recover.

What is the Work Ahead?

424

HOUSEHOLDS need ongoing support to secure housing and jobs, and pay bills

160 HOUSEHOLDS need help moving or paying for storage so home repairs can begin

99 HOUSEHOLDS are waiting for home repairs

“Right after the storm, recovery was loud — so many voices, and so many resources. Now it is nearly silent — there are fewer helpers, and some survivors have given up. The hardest part is still unfolding for many in Buncombe County.”

— JASMINE MOORE, CASE MANAGER
